HAD THREE BRIDES FOR 3 DAYS EACH; GOT THEIR MONEY

Alleged Count Gave All a Short Honeymoon Before He Vanished With Cash.

TRIO GETS AFTER HIM.

Three Victims Band Together and Join With Police in Hunt.

"Ah, he was an odd looking, polite, good-natured, manly, a good church worker, never drank, chewed tobacco nor smoked," is the description ascribed to a man of thirty-five years who posed as a Count and who married at least three New York women and disappeared three days after each ceremony and incidentally took with him all "wifely" cash. These three young women have banded together and have given the police descriptions of their husband and vow that all will work in unison until the culprit is safe behind prison bars.

The manner in which the young women were tricked first made its way into court yesterday when Supreme Court Justice Cowan annulled the marriage of Mrs. Augusta Hanson Young to Harry Young. Mrs. Young was wife No. 2. Mrs. Young today can be seen at No. 208 Fifth Avenue, where she is employed as a governess, but she will not respond to the name of Mrs. Young.

"You know I never believed in the number 13 being unlucky," said Miss Hanson today, "but I am convinced that it is, for it was on Dec. 13, 1912, that I first met Mr. Young. I went to a dance in Terrace Garden and after a few passing smiles danced with him. Oh, how that man could dance. He was just fine, and to tell you the truth he danced his way into my heart."

"Well, he met me now and then and at last gave me a beautiful diamond ring. He really made true love to me in Romeo style. April 7, 1914, we were married at City Hall. We took rooms in an uptown hotel, as Mr. Young told me we were to travel and he did not want to furnish a home in New York, as he did not like life in a big city. On the second day of our marriage, all went well. We went taxi riding, saw shows and remained out late seeing the cabaret.

"The eventual third day was the one that I will never forget. It was about noon that he told me to go out and buy the best dress I could. I did it. In the afternoon he insisted that I take my money from a bank in Brooklyn to a New York bank. We went over there and drew out $500. He told me he would keep it until the day following, as the banks were closed upon our arrival in New York."

"In the evening we went to Terrace Garden again. All was lovely. He told of how he first met me there and was in love with me at first sight. Then he told me to order dinner. This was done and in the midst of it Mr. Young arose and said he was going to telephone. He did and that was the last I ever saw of him and my good. I waited for him to return, but never heard from him. I am free now, but will do all I can to find him, for I believe he has a dozen wives in New York City."

"It seems that he would marry only when his cash was low. This has been proved to me by the means he employed in tricking at least two others right here in New York. We have banded together and I will remain in my position in the league as wife No. 3 and work with his other New York wives whom he tricked."

HE WAS A NOBLEMAN AND A CHURCH WORKER.

Wife No. 2 resides at No. 121 West Seventieth Street. She was married to Young, although under another name, July 8, 1915. He left her three days after the marriage ceremony in the City Hall, and with him went about $500 of her money.

"What can a poor girl do when a handsome man meets you and says he is in love with you, wants to marry you and procuring himself to be a nobleman who has come to this country with a great fortune and a church and charity worker?" asked Miss Nordberg, when seen by an Evening World reporter today. "I am a member of the Salvation Army and while preaching at No. 141 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, my eyes fell upon a man about five feet four inches tall, weighing about 130 pounds, well dressed, with a most pleasing face, perfectly white teeth and a nose that would make any one love him."

"After the meeting this man came to me and introduced himself as Mr. Lundin. About a week later, we were married. On the second day of our marriage, he received a telegram from his supposed father in the West who wanted Lundin to come to Cincinnati at once. He said he was mortally injured in falling from a race horse on his father's estate in the West."

HE'S STILL VISITING HIS INJURED BROTHER IN THE WEST.

"On the third day he said he would have to leave me, but desired that I could find solace in continuing to Salvation Army work. Just before he left he asked me for a complete list of my relatives. I loved him and, though I did not want him to leave, I did want him to see his brother before he died. I felt sorry for him and, as he explained that all my ready cash was tied up in bonds and mortgages, I gave him $200. He left me and so did my money. Although I have long desired to see him, I could never get him to come back."

"He is a dirty scoundrel to pick up poor girls who are good. He is a living devil, and I have lost all my love for him, and now I want to see him behind prison bars. He even told me he would leave a large package of securities in my name in a New York bank, but he fooled me there again. I am a Christian and know that the Lord will see that this man gets his just deserts. I have combined with his three New York wives and will do all I can to land him right. One time I would like to get from him his $200 guitar which he stole from me."

Wife No. 1 is Miss Mary Johnson, a pretty governess of No. 116 East Fifty-fifth Street, who met a real Mr. Pearson while attending religious services at a New York church. He met and wooed Miss Johnson in a few weeks. Like in the other two cases he told his wife that he was rich and dreamed with her of how she would be mistress of a million dollar mansion along Fifth Avenue within a short time. This was several years ago. As in the other cases "Mr. Pearson" went away from her three days after her marriage to him and about $500 of her savings went with him. She has not seen nor heard from him.

"Oh, it is just another case of a man taking advantage of a trusting girl," cried Miss Johnson when seen today. "He made love to me in true fashion. It was all like a dream. I want to tell you but I do not want to go to court and get the publicity over the way I have been tricked. I do not know how many wives he has but I hope he will soon be caught and then, believe me, there will be nothing doing."

NOTES FOR WOMEN.
Celebrating her eighty-sixth birthday, Amelia Barr, the novelist, made a remark. "Women," she says, "no longer dress. They undress."

Suicide Was Greek Army Officer.
Peter Petersen, a barber, twenty-seven years old, killed himself by an this morning in his room at No. 129 East Twenty-ninth Street. From papers found in his effects, it was learned that he had been a lieutenant in the Greek army under the Prince of Smolens. Two years ago he married a seventeen-year-old Greek girl, and two months later his girl friend was taken away from him and annulled proceedings instituted by her parents.

GIRL HELPS CAPTURE MAN SHE SAYS TRIED TO ROB HER IN PARK

Miss Grace Gordon, Who Pursued Fugitive, Is Good Person for Thieves to Avoid.

Early visitors in the west side of Central Park today will be startled to see a well-dressed, unobtrusive man running for the Seventeenth and Street entrance, followed by a girl, Miss Grace L. Gordon, of No. 81 Riverside Drive. Miss Gordon, with her hat on one side and her hair down, was running faster than the man and at every jump she uttered a loud, angry scream.

Near Central Park West Policeman Smith stepped in front of the fugitive and stopped him. He seemed grateful the policeman was at hand to protect him from the girl. He said he was Paul Valentine, a photographer, of No. 221 West One Hundred and Sixty-third Street, out of work and hungry, and that he had made a great mistake in selecting Miss Gordon as the victim for a robbery.

In the West Side Court Miss Gordon, who is secretary for a civil engineer in the Hudson Terminal Building, said she had entered the Park at Seventy-seventh Street for a stroll before taking a car to her office. At Seventy-fourth Street Valentine came out of the bushes, walked ahead of her toward the Bow Bridge and then turned back. A moment later, she saw him, in a single flash, he jumped, holding her arms, threw her to the road, pulled her on the back, took her hand bag and ran.

"I called after him," she said, "but he would have the money in the bag. It was only 80 cents and a 10-cent change, which were very important to my employer. He didn't pay any attention, and then I lost my temper and went after him. I wish I had reached him before the policeman."

Valentine was held for trial in $1,500 bail on a charge of highway robbery.

SCHOOL TEACHER HELD FOR STRIKING A PUPIL

Manual Training Instructor Must Stand Trial on Charge Made by Boy.

John H. Stauff, a teacher in Public School No. 18, at No. 121 East Fifty-first Street, was held today in Yorkville Police Court that he had struck his pupils from time to time, and particularly that he had struck Thomas Sheridan, fourteen years old, on the head with a brush in the classroom last Friday. Two witnesses were taken in the boy's suit at Flower Hospital. Stauff was released in $25 cash bail by Magistrate Deane, for appearance in the Court of Special Sessions.

Sheridan, who is a small youngster, and lives at No. 959 Second Avenue, charged that Stauff had not only beaten him, but had stabbed him in the head with a pair of scissors, and several of the boy's classmates corroborated him.

Stauff testified that he had been reading to the boy from "The Hoo-ler Schoolmaster," and that when one of the class asked to borrow the book he replied that it was at home being read by his little eight-year-old son. The idea of a child so young reading the book prompted Sheridan, so Stauff testified, to exclaim, "The book is out there!" The teacher admitted that this angered him and he struck Sheridan with the brush. He denied using scissors.
